January 2008

Dear Mr. Obama,

I am an American living in Berlin, Germany and support your candidacy.

I wrote an article in Weltexpress - www.weltexpress.com that might be of interest to you and your election committee. Please have a look.

With your support, I would like to offer you my services here in Berlin by establishing an "Obama for President - Germany Headquarters".

Your presence in Germany's capital and central Europe is vitally important. Additionally, overseas voters will be more inspired by your presence here.

The Germans are highly impressed with your vision and fresh views on American and global politics. As a journalist and consultant living in Europe, I have the ability to engage diverse business sectors - government and private. The discussions I have with Americans living here are very supportive of your campaign. With that in mind, it appears an "Obama for President - Berlin Affiliate Office" would support your overseas votes and global presence.

From what I have been able to determine, no other candidate has an affiliate office in Germany. Your campaign presence in Germany's capital would be highly advantageous and rewarding.

The company I have in Berlin - Global Expat Counseling (www.global-expat-counseling.com) supports the next president of the United States of America - Barack Obama.

I look forward to your reply and hope I can be of assistance to your presidential election campaign in Berlin, Germany.

President Kennedy made an indelible impression in Berlin when he stood before the German nation and world and remarked, "Ich bin ein Berliner". Germans, Europeans and the world are looking for a politician who can offer the same hope that President Kennedy offered. Your position has now generated the same inspiration that President Kennedy conveyed. One day, we may see and hear President Obama say, "Berlin, Ich bringe hoffnung" (Berlin, I bring hope"). In other words, to the world, I am saying, "I offer new hope and world balance".

Respectfully,

David Gwodzik, Ed.M.
